Prsentation de l'diteur Anthropologist Olivia West is determined to find her missing best friend. As children, she and Emma Martin wandered into Heaven's Bottom, an isolated Kentucky community cut off by the Ohio River and mountainous terrain. The two women share strange memories of the traumatic experience. Emma is convinced they witnessed a blood sacrifice and moon magic, surrounded by zombies. As a scientist, Olivia believes there's a logical explanation. Detective Steven Lewis pursues his own investigation of the mysterious town. His wife, a social worker, fought her way into The Bottom to investigate suspected child abuse. She didn't make it out alive. Haunted by grief and regret, Steven is obsessed with finding her killer. He's convinced the murderer is hiding in the wild forest, camouflaged by the swirling mist. Olivia and Steven enter into an uneasy partnership to find Emma and solve his wife's brutal murder. They contact Sheriff Noah

McCracken, who holds the local law enforcement role that's been passed down through his family for centuries. Like his ancestors, the sheriff ignores the chilling events in Heaven's Bottom. Can Olivia and Steven convince Noah to "release the McCracken" in time to save their lives? SPECIAL BONUS: As a reader appreciation gift, "The Hand of Karma" mystery/horror short story is included FREE at the end of the book. Biographie de l'auteur Kindle Scout Winner Jada Ryker is the author of the goofy thriller Take the Body and Run. Her other books include Dog Days of Karma, the first Carr Maah Consulting mystery/paranormal novel; A Pink Zombie, with a Mist, a Shaken, Not Stirred, mystery/horror adventure; and Murder Takes a Dare, the first book in the Takes a Dare mystery series. The books combine humor and murder in a total package of entertaining and fun southern adventures. At the same time, Jada sketches in addiction/recovery issues and childhood angst with a deft and compassionate touch. Jada spent the first twenty-odd years of her life in rural Kentucky, many of those years without electricity or running water. In her writings, Jada draws upon her early years of deprivation. Now, she lives in central Kentucky with her wonderful husband and their cat, rescued from the animal shelter. In spite of her humble beginnings, the cat rules the household and is also a kleptomaniac. Once, she stole a Bluetooth and hid it under the couch. It took her humans several days to locate her ill-gotten booty. In her day job, Jada works in higher education. She holds a masters degree in public administration. Jada's mystery adventures are available on in electronic and paperback formats.
