

(Mobile pdf) File size: 65.Mb

Paradise Bound (English Edition)

Par Rafale Dsir
*ePub | *DOC | audiobook | ebooks |*
Download PDF

Dtails sur le produit Rang parmi les ventes : #153479 dans eBooksPubli le: 2015-12-04Sorti le: 2015-12-04Format: Ebook Kindle

(Mobile pdf) Paradise Bound (English Edition)

Par Rafale Dsir : Paradise Bound (English Edition) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Paradise Bound (English Edition):

 Download

 Read Online

Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurNatalie, a young French surgeon, has spent her life living up to other peoples expectations, including those of her possessive boyfriend, Jean-Marc. She flees Paris to visit her friend Simone in Los Angeles, hoping a long vacation will help her find peace with her intensely stressful life. But while unwinding in Venice Beach and partying in Hollywood, she stumbles across a part of herself shed set aside long ago. In sun-drenched Southern California, Natalie unleashes her passionate self, and is tempted by two very attractive and unique men who are determined to claim her for their own. Still, the pull of the past and her left-behind love remains, and Natalie must make the most important choices of her life: does she return to the safety of the world that she knows, or does she embrace the promise of an unscripted and unpredictable future? ed by Ray Simmons for Readers' FavoriteParadise Bound is one of the most balanced and well written romance novels I have ever read. Not only does Rafale Dsir know a lot about the Yin and Yang of romance, but she knows a lot about life. The characters are so real you expect them to walk out of the pages and introduce themselves. The protagonist is Dr. Natalie Dorel, a beautiful, strong, caring woman just finishing her residency at a Paris hospital. Never have I seen the spiritual and emotional cost of being a physician written so well. Natalie is brilliant and she has attained her lifelong dream. She has it all, including a good man, so whats wrong? Rafale Dsir shows us page by page. Paradise Bound is all the more impressive because it is Rafale Dsirs first novel. I am in awe. I love how the reader is shown the value of art. Like Natalie, a lot of us get caught up in things that are concrete and are expected of us, to such an extent that we neglect the spiritual side. This can be costly and very difficult to understand or correct. Everything in Paradise Bound teaches us the value of life and love. When a story can teach so much and be so entertaining, I consider it a success and I look for that authors name in my future trips to the book store. Great dialogue, realistic people and situations, and a perfect rendition of the fights, misunderstandings, and hidden fears that come between friends, family, and lovers make Paradise Bound a compelling read. If you love romance, pick it up and start it, one Friday night when youre not working the next day. Paradise Bound is the solo medalist winner of the 2017 New Apple Summer E-Book Award in the category InspirationalPrsentation de l'diteur Natalie, a young French surgeon, has spent her life living up to other peoples expectations, including those of her possessive boyfriend, Jean-Marc. She flees Paris to visit her friend Simone in Los Angeles, hoping a long vacation will help her find peace with her intensely stressful life. But while unwinding in Venice Beach and partying in Hollywood, she stumbles across a part of herself shed set aside long ago. In sun-drenched Southern California, Natalie unleashes her passionate self, and is tempted by two very attractive and unique men who are determined to claim her for their own. Still, the pull of the past and her left-behind love remains, and Natalie must make the most important choices of her life: does she return to the safety of the world that she knows, or does she embrace the promise of an unscripted and unpredictable future? ed by Ray Simmons for Readers' Favorite Paradise Bound is one of the most balanced and well written romance novels I have ever read. Not only does Rafale Dsir know a lot about the Yin and Yang of romance, but she knows a lot about life. The characters are so real you expect them to walk out of the pages and introduce themselves. The protagonist is Dr. Natalie Dorel, a beautiful, strong, caring woman just finishing her residency at a Paris hospital. Never have I seen the spiritual and emotional cost of being a physician written so well. Natalie is brilliant and she has attained her lifelong dream. She has it all, including a good man, so whats wrong? Rafale Dsir shows us page by page. Paradise Bound is all the more impressive because it is Rafale Dsirs first novel. I am in awe. I love how the reader is shown the value of art. Like Natalie, a lot of us get caught up in things that are concrete and are expected of us, to such an extent that we neglect the spiritual side. This can be costly and very difficult to understand or correct. Everything in Paradise Bound teaches us the value of life and love. When a story can teach so much and be so entertaining, I consider it a success and I look for that authors name in my future trips to the book store. Great dialogue, realistic people and situations, and a perfect rendition of the fights, misunderstandings, and hidden fears that come between friends, family, and lovers make Paradise Bound a compelling read. If you love romance, pick it up and start it, one Friday night when youre not working the next day. Paradise Bound is the solo medalist winner of the 2017 New Apple Summer E-Book Award in the category InspirationalBiographie de l'auteur Born in Paris to a French literature teacher and a physician, Rafale Dsir was raised in the French Caribbean island of Martinique. An artistic child who loved reading above all, she chose science over literature when she moved back to France to become an orthodontist, but a trip to United States radically changed her life. She studied fine arts at Otis/Parsons, film production at NYU, and tried her hand at acting, modeling, and graphic design. Rafale Dsir is a painter, writer, Tai Chi instructor, and she practices orthodontics in Los Angeles where she lives with her two daughters. A published author in the dental field, she has written short stories, flash fiction, and poetry in English and French. Paradise Bound is her first novel.